Starred Review. PreSchool-K&A –â •This is a concept book with a difference: on every other spread, four animals dressed in various outfits parade across the verso toward a type of vehicle (fire engine, tractor, race car, etc.) on the right, and the text asks, "Who is driving?" The next spread reveals the answer as the correctly outfitted animal is shown taking off behind the wheel, accompanied by appropriate sound effects. Readers have to notice minute details of each animal's clothing in order to come up with the right answer. The vivid acrylic illustrations in primary colors have a three-dimensional look and will delight toddlers, although they might not be able to match all the drivers and their vehicles without a little help. The format is clear and simple with white pages as background for the animals, alternating with brightly colored pages for the full pictures. Children will love guessing who each driver will be as well as helping to make each vehicle's noise. A surefire winner for the youngest set. –â •Judith Constantinides, formerly at East Baton Rouge Parish Main Library, LA Copyright © Reed Business Information, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc. All

First published in Belgium, this picture book challenges children to guess which animal will drive a certain vehicle. "Who is driving . . . / . . . the fire engine?" asks the text on the first double-page spread, illustrated with four oddly dressed characters striding purposefully across the page: a chicken in a jumper, a red-capped goat lugging a suitcase, an elephant equipped as a firefighter, or a bear wearing his cap backward. Other questions (and other animals) dot the remaining pages. The answers are not always obvious, though observant children can pick up visual clues. And even if they don't get all the answers right, they're sure to enjoy the final spread, which shows the fire engine, fancy car, race car, tractor, convertible, jeep, airplane, and turtle (on foot) and asks "But who . . . / . . . will get there first?" Vivid against white or solid-colored backgrounds, the clarity and pizzazz of the sturdy images will draw children into the fun. Good for storytimes. I first bought this book for my now 15 year old when he 3. All my children have loved it. They all liked making the sounds and guessing who drives. I give it as a gift now to new Mommies and their babes.

This is such a great book! I used to read this to my oldest son in paperback when he was younger and loved it. I am so excited to own the board book version. I read this with my youngest son who just turned 3. In the beginning he loved guessing who he thought was driving and even though he now has it memorized he still requests this book every night.

My son loves this book, I ask him who is driving before turning the page to see who is on the following pages.

Both of my kids (5 & 3) love this book! It's fun and engaging.

good as advertized

This is my family's favorite Leo Timmers book. For each vehicle, you have to figure out which animal is responsible for driving it (e.g. Farmer Pig and the tractor). My daughter loves the graphics and laughs at the different animals and cars. The pages are colorful and well drawn.

I can't wait to use this in my preschool groups!

Fun for my grand child Easy 2 use First book like this we have used on our new tablet. Our first review.
