Synopsis

When a beautiful professor is accused of being a witch, she retreats to her cabin in the woods. Soon a man dressed like a scarecrow begins to stalk her, and vandals leave pentagrams at her front gate. The town of Erie, Indiana has never known a witch hunt, but after the first accusation, the news spreads like wildfire. “She stole another woman’s husband, then murdered him,” people raged in the local diner. “She uses her black cats to cast spells to do her evil deeds!” But what do the accusers really want? How is Erie’s crime boss involved? In the meantime, while the pink mansion’s attic is being remodeled, Katz, Jake and their seven cats move out to a rural farmhouse, which is next door to the “witch.” They find themselves drawn into a deadly conflict on several fronts. It’s up to Katz and her seven extraordinary felines to unravel the tangle of lies before mass hysteria wrecks the town. Murder, mayhem, and a cold case make this book a thrilling, action-packed read that will keep you guessing until the very end.

It’s like going home again to visit old friends. Katherine and Jake are moving to a country farmhouse while the attic is being renovated in the "pink lady". Their next door neighbor has been labeled as a "witch". She (Elizabeth (Lizzie)) is also a cat lover. Lizzie's husband disappeared years ago. Everyone says that she put a spell on him. The town's kids harass her and leave signs and symbols on the gate to her property. While this is going on, the director of the no-kill animal shelter is murdered right in front of her property. The first night in the cabin, Jake has to go out of town. Colleen stays with Katherine. All sorts of trouble breaks out. There is a scarecrow running amok. The new man in Lizzie's life beats her up and she runs to Katherine's farmhouse. The scarecrow had held Katz and Colleen hostage then ran away with Katz's gun. When Lizzie shows up, the man who beat her up shows up in a black ski mask. He holds Lizzie hostage making Katherine let them in the house. The man is looking for a key that was hidden in a rock by a shed. There has been illegal activity going on behind the back of the farmhouse's owner. It all comes to a head and then the end on this night. Who will live and who will die? The cats get out during the mayhem. Will they be alright? Will they all be found? Read the book. I really like this series. Can't wait for the next one.

Well I just finished the new book and I loved it. Now I'm back to waiting for the next one. I'll probably reread it in a week or so. I absolutely love these books and this one was fantastic. If you haven't read them you definitely need to.

Loved this book...but I didn't realize it was book 8 of the cozy mystery book series!! Next matter...the author briefly mentions past situations so I think it's ok to read out of sequence. I look forward to reading the other 7 books!! So get cozy and read them, especially if you are a cat lover like me!! Enjoy!!

Was a interesting story line, and likeable characters. The fresh corpse was not an innocent victim, but turned out to be a character that made using up a bullet totally worth the trouble. As an added value, no good guys were bumped off, but a total scoundrel bit the dust to wind down life's problems to a manageable level. You will not be left weighted down by too many unsolvable situations, nor exiting on an impossibly perfect world either.

This 8th installment of Karen Anne Golden's Cat Series was well worth the wait! I loved this story with all the character's Karen introduces us to. If course, you can't but fall in love with her cats. Murder, Drug Dealing, an illicit affair all tied together makes for delicious reading from a superb Author. A must read!

I've read The Cats That series and like this one the best...I think. However, I really enjoyed them all. The main characters are fully developed and familiar. This book resolves an ongoing saga from previous books and now clears the way for new experiences and excitement.I recommend reading all the books in order.

This is the latest book in the series. I have read them all. I liked the new Lizzie character. As always the cats were wonderful! Well worth reading
